SOME INFORMATION ABOUT EDMONTON

Edmonton, the capital of Alberta dates back to 1795, in which year the Hudson's Bay Co. built a fur post on the North Saskatchewan river about twenty-five miles south of the present Edmonton. It was so named by George Sutherland, the Hudson's Bay officer who built it, because Edmonton, England, was the birth-place of his clerk, John Pruden.

In 1807, the old Fort Edmonton was destroyed by the blood Indians, and a new post was promptly built on the bank of river where the city stands today. This soon became the principal fur depot of what is now known as the province of Alberta.

The parliament buildings stand on the site of this fort, and on the opposite banks of the Saskatchewan stand the buildings of the provincial university.

Edmonton, the commercial and financial centre of seventy-five thousand square miles of territory is geographically situated three hundred miles north of the Montana boundary line, two hundred miles east of the Rocky Mountains, seven hundred and seventy miles from Vancouver on the C.N.R., and eight hundred and forty miles on the C.P.R. It is eight hundred miles west of Winnipeg via either railroad.

It is most important to bear in mind that Edmonton is the gateway to the upper valley of the Saskatchewan, the great drainage basin of the Athabasca, Peace, Slave, and MacKenzie rivers. Recent valuable mineral discoveries in this great north country will, of necessity, lead to a tremendous future development of this vast region, for which Edmonton is the supply base. At present, the city is building a lucrative trade by supplying merchandise to every fur post, fishing station, mining camp, and trapper's cabin in that region.

As the centre of transportation, Edmonton has kept pace with her natural location facilities as regards rail, highways, navigation, and airways. Both the C.N.R. and C.P.R. transcontinental lines serve the city as well as twelve branch lines radiating therefrom. The latter serve over three hundred towns and villages.

One of the finest municipally-owned airports is to be found here, and the airway service has grown with such rapid strides that at present a close communication is maintained with the whole North American continent.

With all the varied industrial activities surrounding Edmonton, such as farming, mining, fur trapping, fishing, and lumbering, the city may well look with the utmost confidence to a bright, prosperous future.
